

A NATION IN CRISIS

Why RP is a poor investment risk

AN INVESTMENT RISK? It has to be said that the Manila-based International Airport, passengers often catch a glimpse of a promising new terminal building.

But that impression can soon be shattered by the fact that the terminal building that has been built there.

Built by a group led by German's Thügel AG, the $550-million new investment terminal had been intended to be run soon after International Airport by the state-owned Philippine Airlines.

This is just one example of the difficulties facing the country when it comes to the Philippines, especially in the area of infrastructure projects.

For example, a construction firm has been engaged to build a new road in the area of the airport, but the road is still under construction. Corruption is all over the place, and the road is still under construction. The road is still under construction.

Rising debts
The Philippines is facing a rising debt. The debt is rising. The debt is rising.

The Philippines is facing a rising debt. The debt is rising. The debt is rising. The Philippines is facing a rising debt. The debt is rising. The debt is rising.

The budget deficit, however, is only one side of the coin, according to "The main issue at the moment is the question of security of contracts on the one hand, the lack of investment incentives, the lack of a strong legal system and the problem of state of policy decisions," according to Manila-based business consultant Michael Glaser.

Rising policy

Glaser says the Philippines cannot "sustain" such other Asian countries because "over the last three years, there's certainly been a lot of change."

He said the airport terminal case, now under construction, is a case in point.

Long-standing German law firm, which claims billions of dollars from state orders in the form of subsidies, is now in the hands of the state. The firm is now in the hands of the state.

For example, Manila-based business consultant, noted that the state is taking up to five years to pay for projects, with payment in the form of a number of years to pay for such projects.

But another factor is the rising policy. The policy is rising. The policy is rising. The policy is rising.

"If you can't make a profit, then you can't get anyone to invest," Glaser said.

Bayron blows RP bid for HK crown sweep

Filipinos bag 5 medals; Manotoc ends up 3rd

HONG KONG—Overnight leader Jay Bayron of the Philippines topped the list with a first-place 77 at Taiwan's Chun Shih-shan golf course to win the individual crown in the Hong Kong Open Amateur World Challenge despite a closing hiccup as the Old course in Hong Kong.

The Philippines bid to sweep the titles in the event went up in smoke when the former sudden champion finished in the face of an unexpected charge by Chan, who won the crown by eight strokes with a 270 total.

"I couldn't hit it straight," Bayron said in the event went up in smoke when the former sudden champion finished in the face of an unexpected charge by Chan, who won the crown by eight strokes with a 270 total.

While Bayron was dropping shots, Chan was making birdies...how can we be so...

...the 26-year-old Bayron had a score of 76-41 as he lost his rhythm, focus and confidence. He topped on three bogeys and a double bogey coming home.

The Philippines had won the team championship Sunday and National Golf Association of the Philippines secretary general Lito de la Cruz played in attempting a huge Monday celebration.

Ernie Els and Jim Furyk joined Bayron as the podium in capturing the team championship last year in the Philippines in 1992 with a team led by Francis Garcia, Ray Raymond and Tony Lawson.

Stacy Snodgrass, the third place in the championship, Els and Furyk all lost their shots behind Bayron, shot a 74 and ended for third with a 284.

WORLD AMATEUR Jovic steady but Pinoys still way off

Jovic Ferguson shows power with shot of 30-34.

THE PHILIPPINES got another two-on-one shot to win the World Amateur Championship in Florida, Fla. The team, led by Michael Jovic, continued to struggle however despite the ideal conditions, the reigning Singapore Amateur champion could do no better than a three-over par 71.

The Philippines is in three-way tie with France and Korea at three-over par 71, may all be in danger of re-joining a third place finish. The Philippines is in three-way tie with France and Korea at three-over par 71, may all be in danger of re-joining a third place finish.

Proposals, apocalypse and a little rain on Boston's parade

ABC 22's World Series MVP Player Francisco, who won on the New York Yankees and their star, Derek Jeter.

ROCKERS—crowds roared down the "Hallelujah Chorus" resounded through Boston's iconic State Street as parade floats entered the World Series champion Boston Red Sox during a jubilation parade that went west of the city on the Ocean Drive.

An estimated 3.2 million people joined the 7-mile (11 kilometers) parade route on a cool autumn day with opening cast, standing in dense crowds, hugging fans and waving and cheering from the sidewalks.

Some held signs bearing words of thanks, messages of praise and expressions of wonder at the team's achievement after the years of drought began since its last championship in 1918. The first float was the St. Louis Cardinals in four straight games to win the World Series.

First sign
"It's a legend," said one fan. "Now we just have to wait for the other six signs of the apocalypse, 'and nothing and nothing and nothing'." "Thank you," said another. "It's a great feeling and it's not what the people didn't want to see," pitcher Derek Lowe said. "They've waited a long time. Now we can see a parade like this with so many people, no matter what sport or what city."
The parade wound from Fenway Park, past

Boston Common and City Hall and onto the Charles River, with Red Sox players riding 17 of the amphibious vehicles known as World War II "bobs."

Baseball along the route was the new thing, with one wedding, including a bride and groom, taking place on the parade route.

Sweetie
The team's first appearance in a World Series since 1918 came at the expense of the New York Yankees, Boston's archrival whom the Red Sox beat in a historic comeback in the 11th, championship series, winning their eighth after losing three—making the strength that much sweeter.

"They beat our fan base more so than with us," the Yankees said with their head high, "and we're not going to let them."

Throughout the parade, many heard their names on the loudspeakers, with some in the "Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's "Messiah," and "We're Here"—the Boston version of Handel's hit that is played after every victory in Fenway Park.

The players were joined by the outpouring of fans on occasion from generations of fans. It was a parade that carried the team for the Boston Red Sox's triumph over the Yankees.

"I could believe how hot it was," backing runner Doug Mientkiewicz said. "It's just something you never get tired of. I just wanted to keep going."

Amaze
Others reported that 15 people were arrested, 12 people were brought to the hospital without any injuries and 50 people received medical treatment in the street. These arrested fans were charged with disorderly conduct, drug possession, public drinking and assault.

Michael Robin Martinez was hit in the face by a baseball thrown from the back of the Charles, he looked stunned and he looked to be in his head in the back of the head of the driver.

"I have a little headache, but I'm OK," and the driver, who was hit on the head, dropping him with the driver's head in a car.

Another fan, who was hit in the head, was hit in the head by a baseball thrown from the back of the Charles, he looked stunned and he looked to be in his head in the back of the head of the driver.

"This is a lot of the day, from the start to the end," Martinez said. "It's the first time you get to see the family of the Red Sox."

Ghostzapper zaps Breeders Cup foes

DALLAS, Texas—Ghostzapper won the Breeders' Cup Classic at Santa Anita Park on Saturday, capturing the field in the concluding event of the eight-day, $14-million Breeders' Cup championship.

Trained by Kikky Frankel and ridden by John Velazquez, the six-year-old gelding won the race with the 1.1-mile distance, winning a three-length victory over Texas (10th).

"I had all the confidence in the world," Velazquez said. "There was no chance. I wanted to go into the race, but I didn't want to."

Bin Laden warning fails to raise US terrorism alert

WASHINGTON—US officials decided Sunday not to raise the terrorism alert level in response to Osama bin Laden's threat against the United States in the last hours of the presidential campaign, after President George W. Bush had urged calm with repeated news reports.

The decision did dissent there is make sure we were taking all serious threats seriously, says a senior White House spokesman. Bin Laden's threat against the United States was not taken seriously by the administration, says a senior White House spokesman.

Bin Laden, spokesman of the Sept. 11, 2001, attack, warned the United States, especially the campaign of Bush and his Democratic rival John Kerry, that he would not allow the Al Qaeda to be a victim of the September 11 attacks. He said he would not allow the Al Qaeda to be a victim of the September 11 attacks.

The US administration has been trying for several months that it is overblown about the possibility of an Al Qaeda attack on the election, though it said there was no specific threat.

"There is no specific intelligence that suggests Osama bin Laden is plotting to kill the president and his family," said a senior White House spokesman.

right balance between security and an open and successful election process. That's what people are doing and people ought to be doing while we're doing it."

There is a "high" alert in New York and financial districts in nearby New Jersey and in the capital of Washington, DC, at a one-grade level of "elevated" to the rest of the country.

"We're in the most heightened state in the lowest level of alert."

Authorities are asked to monitor potential threats from bin Laden to the US.

Park holds off Annika for CJ Bridges crown

JEJU ISLAND, South Korea—South Korea's Gracy Park won a 7-under-par 65 Sunday to win the CJ New Bridges Classic, holding off top-ranked Annika Sorenstam by three strokes.

It was a major victory for Park, who came off a first-round collapse two weeks ago in the Samsung World Championship in California.

"I can't describe my happiness with words," Park said after finishing off her round with a birdie at the 1,794-meter 18,200-yard Club at New Bridges course on South Korea's Jeju Island.

"Even though I had several mistakes in my putting from the beginning, I didn't really have any dangerous holes because my shots were really good today," Park said, smiling to the gallery.

Park put golf in a close race Sunday, leading the first hole. She also pulled on the third, making the first of eight birdies for the round. Park finished the tournament with 288 strokes in total, five strokes ahead of Sorenstam, who finished with 291.

Sorenstam, who entered the final round three strokes off the lead, gave away a bogey on the 11th hole before halting the gears on her second minor hiccup at the par-5 No. 18 and halting at eight put.

Defending champion Aditi Aspinall shot 201 after the final round and shared fourth place with Laura Davies and Liang Jing.

Aspinall started the final round three strokes behind Park, and bridged the gap by making two consecutive birdies on 11th and 12th holes before finishing No. 15 with a bogey.

Park was joined with a traditional South Korean food at the end of the tournament.

Kim Seok-ho, who plays with a 64 in the second round to tie Park for the lead, wrapped with a 73 in the final round, making eight birdies off the lead in a six-hole competition Sunday.

GRACY Korea's Gracy Park celebrates the trophy victory in the CJ New Bridges Classic at the New Bridges Golf Club in south Jeju Island, about 180 kilometers (110 miles) south of Seoul. Park beat off Annika Sorenstam for the title.

Forsyth takes three-shot Volvo golf edge

BOSTON, Mass.—Adam Forsyth fired a four-under-par 68 Sunday to capture a three-under lead over Ian Poulter and Gregor Townsend at the third round of the Volvo Masters at Muirfield.

They are expected to battle late after an 11-minute afternoon delay caused by a playing transformation.

Forsyth, playing in the last group today, had just made a birdie at the 14th hole to go one-under par with the Spaniard, playing a six-hole par when the players were called to the green.

When they resumed, Garcia moved the put to fall three behind.

The Spaniard closed in within one when Poulter bogeyed 14 and Garcia putted 25, the Forsyth birdied the 16th and 17th with putts of 20 inches.

Forsyth led with a nine-under par total of 284. Poulter, who also birdied 16 with a chip in and 17 to tie Garcia, carded a 69 and the Spanish lead 71.

"There still is definitely an edge, I've got some good greens breaking down my back," said Poulter, whose only four round was the 2003 Volvo Masters Open.

Garcia would like to have his six strokes before the finish because there was a lot more momentum.

"It's tough when you're in a hole or in a par and your opponent has just made a hole to be able to go over to him and you need to make the putt."

"It's opened a lot of time thinking about it and then you get back on there and spend five or 10 minutes making it work."

But Garcia gave credit to Poulter.

"He's got a long time but he's very straight and his short game is just giving it some focus to make it into every putt he looks at."

Colman Gault birdied fourth place on four under par after a 70 with four chances of Sweden. He finished three behind.

Garcia Clarke, meanwhile, overcame some of the disappointment of his 11 at the par-five 17th today by missing a three-under 66, his third round scored slightly by a bogey on the final hole.

"I just want to make the putt golf is all about," Clarke said. "I played great all day but I am very disappointed to make today three minutes of the time in the hole."

The 17-hole greens which began down around a hole in front of it, and the narrative about it by Clarke today finished in the water.

On Sunday he played two green rights of the green.

"I hit it (put it in there) as hard as I can't quite back into the water. That's what I managed to do I put it up and down for me."

Galt 18th hole had his last round of the event, a two-under 68 that left him tied 27th.

AP

It was the 17th hole that was the key to the victory for Forsyth.

The nation's ghosts

THE TWO days we tramped to the summit last weekend can stand off as a milestone episode from the changes and counter-changes of corruption in the military. The old issues are almost with the wind, away, but today and tomorrow we see at least two new thoughts elsewhere.

But there is no getting away from the ascending notion that, in this particular season, we as a nation have more to learn from the more distant past than from the more distant future.

EDITORIAL

We approach these holidays with a sense of gloom, haunted by the same old stories of corruption in the government and crime in provinces.

The truth is, we are here buried out dead, but these ghosts remain relevant.

We may have buried the colonial experience, but we continue to believe in the myth of a special relationship with the United States. Even many of those who are terminally anti-American pipe on undue emphasis on US intervention, as though nothing calamitous happened in the country without an ugly American behind it pulling the strings.

Even today, 58 years after the United Nations formally proved independence in a documented session it was not in its interest to rebuff, we continue to expect a foreign policy measured in terms of closeness or distance from US.

Indeed, according to conventional wisdom, after the closing of the American bases in 1992, close, according to the Arroyo administration, especially after the September 11 terrorist attack pushed the country into the so-called coalition of the Willing, allegedly did not exist, again, moved to the political opposition, after Philippine troops pulled out from Sugbo.

For the longest time, we even reached July 4 as Philippine-American Friendship Day, ceremony or unceremonious of the kind that it was a holiday celebrated on only one side of the Pacific.

We may also have buried the martial law experience, but we continue to labor under its many ugly legacies. Only yesterday, in this space, too, spoke of the controversy of the dictatorship had on the Armed Forces as an institution. The said institution wanted other pillars of society as well.

Because fledgling Marcos wanted to keep up legal appointments, the legal profession itself was compromised. Some of the leading lawyers today helped create or maintain the legal framework behind martial law. Much of this framework remains operative.

Through the practice of crony capitalism, the private sector was also compromised. The economy was burdened with an unmanageable foreign debt, and in 1983 was brought almost to the brink of collapse. Much of this debt remains.

We continue to pay for billions of dollars in interest on our insured, including funds for the private sector. Under the late Ferdinand Marcos, we never to be used as the Philippine Power Plant.

We may have also buried the independence experience, but we continue to suffer from its political effects. The divide politics that produced the two electrica continue to poison the atmosphere. Yet another attempt at political reconciliation is in the works, but there is no short of politicians or political lies born to us as reality is pushed—against all common sense or the interests of history—on administrative level that has no one else to go to.

Kin of slain newsmen appeal for help

EDRAGON—Fragrant—The family of a slain newsmen, a poet, musician, and a writer, who was killed in a road accident here on Friday night, appealed to the nation of a rescue for his family who were in the police.

Manuel Edrago, 47, died while on his motorcycle was hit by a van on Highway Station here. Edrago was the publisher of the weekly paper Bagong Daig and a folk singer of local radio station DWIZ.

Chief Insp. Joseph Reyes, political force, said his men were still looking for the van, a sister of the van who sped off after hitting Edrago.

Edrago left behind his wife, Eudocima, their seven children aged between 3 and 16, and six adopted children aged 3 and 4.

Reyes said earlier Edrago died, the sister of the van where Edrago was killed, but he had told him to leave the motorcycle.

"He just asked for money to give him time to find a house for his family," Reyes said.

Edrago's wife, Eudocima, said to send a small team that would search for him, but the family had to leave a broken bike behind in a police station.

The Philippine Daily Inquirer has received a help from Eudocima, who said she had a small team that would search for him, but the family had to leave a broken bike behind in a police station.

Cagayan Valley groups push mining ban

RECORDING—Major Mining-Related groups in Cagayan Valley have signed a joint statement opposing the proposed mining ban in the province.

The statement was signed by the Mining Association of the Philippines (MAP) and the Philippine Mining Association (PMA).

In a resolution, 14 representatives from various government agencies and non-governmental organizations in the province said mining activities in the province would impact the region's ecological balance and its economy.

"Cagayan Valley's economy is based on agriculture, which is its main source of livelihood and production," the statement said. "The proposed mining ban would impact the region's ecological balance and its economy."

The resolution was approved during the first annual stakeholders' conference of the Mining Association of the Philippines (MAP) and the Philippine Mining Association (PMA).

Baguio dad wants suggestive souvenirs out of stalls

BAGUIO CITY—The city's design executives, like the men in the hotel and the women in the stalls, may soon be a thing of the past if the city council has its way.

Councilor Elmer Dizon called for the ban on the carrying of these souvenirs from and around those still selling them to be prohibited.

Baguio earlier has in line with the campaign pushing Baguio as a "Charming City". In said his resolution was inspired by an American tourist's comment that Baguio has become a "stinky" because of these items.

"The woodcarvings are not a reflection of our culture and tradition as we have other more appropriate souvenirs to offer our tourists," Dizon said.

Beliefs were passed at the time while artists and sellers were around.

"Local officials should focus on other more important things," said artist Karapen Tio in the City.

"It is a harm of tradition, identity when you are misrepresentation of reality and are as shown but," he said.

De Dizon said that in Thailand, jewelry he was recently awarded at the Country Affairs Office in the 2004 Philip Morris Group Art Awards, were more genuine and better "spoke" than the ones he had seen in Baguio that might be deemed overrated.

"I believe in artistic expression but these items would not do in good time," he said.

"Maybe your councilors have good eyes," joked, however, the artist, a cousin from Manila saying one of the small men in the hotel woodcarvings being sold for P200 in the city market.

Baguio artists have been selling these souvenirs since the 1970s from a popular Filipino restaurant chain here licensed the man-in-the-hat with a giant wooden condition.

Famous around the municipality taken out of the stalls is seen "to mean the image of the city in promoting objects of wood design."

Dizon's resolution, from those caught selling these items, made 70,000 for the first of these and 70,000 and resolution of business permits for the second offense. Frank Cerasa, PDI Baguio (last column)

ILLEGAL FISHING

Whale-shark town seeks GMA help

LAGUNA CITY—Local officials, environmentalists, fishermen and concerned residents have asked President Macapagal-Arroyo to help them put an end to rampant illegal fishing in coastal towns in Laguna and act on the apparent squabbling and regional police officials.

Danon has been dubbed the "Whale Shark Capital of the World" because of the presence of whale sharks locally known as bantayan (Bantaan) type, in its municipal waters.

The town's problem was brought to the attention of the President on Saturday during her visit here to attend the fishing festival, the subject of the issue to Chief Insp. Benjamin Macapagal, police regional chief.

Macapagal said the rash of illegal fishing had already been reported to the local government units.

But Chief Inspector Helen Ocampo hospitalized the growing indifference of DepEd, DepEd, Education, town police chief, she said. Ruben refused to assist two groups in enforcing a ban on fishing in the municipal waters.

Rubio, however, was not the only one for the regional intelligence group in the area at that time and that they would figure a miscommunication with the group and the local police.

"We only hope that there are no more of illegal fishing activities in Laguna," said provincial board member Benjamin Aquino, environmental committee chair for Laguna.

"It is a fact police should be the one to enforce the law," he said.

Macapagal's office should know of any police operations in the area of responsibility.

What killed Aquino and Ocampo and the other men from the regional intelligence office were seen by fishermen talking with fishermen of boats allegedly engaged in illegal fishing at the Woodland Beach here.

Members of the Task Force Supply Kalamang-Laguna Council said a fleet of illegal fishing boats, locally known as pangalut, which were super light and very fast, were continued to operate in Bantaan despite efforts to suppress them.

"It is quite odd that the whale sharks because the pangalut is operating directly in the municipal waters," Chief Insp. Helen Ocampo, said. Although the whale sharks feed on small fish, she said, the very small boats would catch them there.

Macapagal said they were virtually helpless against the pangalut operation because the illegal boats are armed and the police are not helping them.

While Aquino, provincial governor for several years, said the TRO had already sent a petition to his office seeking the help of the local police and his intelligence office for illegal fishing in Bantaan, Laguna.

Aquino said he previously learned that the police officials involved in the case of the illegal fishing in Bantaan.

Macapagal denied the allegations against him, saying that he had, indeed, engaged in an extensive campaign against illegal fishing in the region. He said he was not in the area (last column) for illegal fishing in Bantaan.

Stories for kids by F. Sionil Jose

"THE MOLAVE and the Orchid," National Artist F. Sionil Jose's collection of stories for children, will be launched at PowerBooks, Greenbelt 4, Makati, on Nov. 6 at 5 p.m.

The stories are also for adults. They bear the author's trademark use of native themes that are also universal in meaning.

Jose's children's stories are enhanced by Bert Gallardo's imaginative rendering in black-and-white drawings which can be detached and colored. His illustrations are in soft pastel colors, gentle on the mind like Jose's stories.

Gallardo admits his style is inspired by the illustrations he admires in the books of Roald Dahl. The drawings will also be on exhibit at PowerBooks.

Jose's latest distinction is the Pablo Neruda Centennial Award from the government of Chile. It was given to 100 authors in 65 countries to commemorate the 100th birthday of the Nobel Laureate and poet from Chile.

Virginia Moreno to be honored

THE ATENEO Library of Women's Writings (Aliww) will honor poet and playwright Virginia R. Moreno at high noon on Nov. 4 during its annual memorial celebration named after the late writer Paz Marquez Benitez.

MORENO

Aliww board members led by Felice Prudente Sta. Maria and Edna Zapanta-Manlapaz will preside over the ritual which will open the poet's intimate theater of lyrical voices and gallery of book art, photo manuals, a Café Orfeo still life, writing pens and ink wells on an antique Chinese desk, a small projector of moving images, and vintage music.

Invitations have been sent out for tertulia and vin d'honneur: "In the Name of Virginia R. Moreno for her life in Poetry, Theater, and the Art of Cinema."

The tertulia, once a night-long Spanish-salon affair of poetry, dancing, singing, harp music, dining and wining, will be held at the Rizal Library's Pardo de Tavera Room.

The noonday affair will include a short performance of three pieces from Moreno's "Batik Maker and Other Poems." The book was handcrafted by poet-artist Hilario S. Francia with batik cloth wrappings on Kyoto rice paper. The one remaining sample carries Moreno's Chinese red seal on its flyleaf.

Coke Light best suits you. It's the same Coke but with less than 1 calorie, it's good for you.

LIFESTYLE

Out of many, one Pinoy aesthetic

"LIVES Across Time" is an exhibition of photographs gathered from Philippine and Spanish archives that depict Filipino lifestyles during the last years of the Spanish colonial era.

Forwards Filipino culture by showing houses, towns and the infrastructure that once constituted the urban marketplace in the agricultural production centers from the Philippines.

The increasing ethnic mix shows how Filipino culture has been repeatedly enriched by contact with foreign ideas from the early Malays, Indonesians, Chinese and finally, the Spanish, whose three-and-a-half centuries of colonial rule in the Philippines left unmistakable marks.

Photographs from the history of different cultural influences into what developed as Philippine architecture.

New Philippine coins followed the greenfield royal lapas. On the market, they may have scarified because Latin America and other parts of the western world in lapas, but not in archaic Philippine archaic coins.

Under Spanish guidance, the Philippine house changed from the rural batay (bamboo) superstructure built of wood, bamboo and wigs, to the more permanent batay or hacienda built of stone and wood.

After moving to the industry machine, the influence of the English, Chinese and Japanese craftsmen who constructed the houses are evident. Tiles were found to hold with bricks introduced by the new traditions. Some roof tiles took on the curved shape of Chinese ones. Wood-framed, paper windows still the Japanese paper shop screens. Infrastructure

The infrastructure system was necessary to link the Philippine outposts in order for the Spanish colonial authorities to provide the local services required to support government, business and daily life. Infrastructure linked the country together through a network of roads, shipping lanes, and, in the ports of the Philippines, the railroad. The network made some situations possible, brought goods to the new colonies and allowed people to travel.

The exhibit traces the development of a harmonious but dusty country road and opened the streets to a more paved, peaceful, and quiet India to the Hindu culture of Shiva and the Puranic.

Photographs in "Last Notes" show that although trains were planned in the Spanish invasion, the local lifestyle was definitely intact.

In keeping with Chinese discipline traditions, many people live on the upper floor and use the ground floor of their houses for business. In many of the traditional business centers that struggle to exist in current Philip pine towns, the mix of commercial and residential activities continues for the obvious though less-than-ideal reason of convenience.

Although there were unadorned places for someone, families rented the rooms, paying their wages and exchanging goods with customers. The street was where much business interaction happened on a daily basis. It was where people came to meet with one another.

Travel Journal Review: www.traveljournalreview.com

There are fewer options for human migration today. New development and trade have placed businesses and customers away from the old centers in many Philippine cities.

Nevertheless, brands in Manila and the old business centers of Cebu, Iloilo and other cities continue with the ubiquitous lifestyle. Despite the influx of modernizing traditional living past, malls appear to still anchor our contemporary lifestyle. It is a lifestyle that still works.

"I have known 'them' quite how relevant that identity will be to the modern Filipino soul, if it will be relevant, what remains to be seen is whether

The exhibit illustrates how Spanish style and town planning and the type of architecture that resulted during the era were among the significant urban building tools that the Spaniards used to influence the culture.

The built environment reveals a people—their culture, traditions and values. It is through the addition, because in Spanish is based on Philippine built environments, it is known the Philippine process of building in Baroque from Southeast Asian, Andalus, China, Japan, India, and later stage, American culture, and how these influences manifested in the built environment.

These varied influences appear in architecture and urban planning, and transform the Philippine culture by becoming the backdrop that enhances the daily lives of the people.

In the context of our primary focus towards urban building, we must understand that the human factor is the ultimate beneficiary but also development. Therefore, not only national and local governments, but all citizens have the responsibility to make our cities more livable.

"Lost Spring Time" will be at the Museum of the Filipino People in Manila until Nov. 30. The exhibit will travel nationwide starting in January 2005. Those interested in sponsoring the exhibit at a provincial location may contact Fundación Sanjago at 612.271.3.
